November 2007

Neal D. Barnard, M.D.
President

Dear PCRM Member,

In 2007, you helped PCRM protect thousands of animals by showing big animal testing and pharmaceutical companies, major universities, and the food industry that we're committed to protecting animals from harm — and we're here for the long haul!

You helped us stand with citizens in communities across the nation against huge organizations like the giant animal tester, Covance, and — by our collective action — you helped us show that the suffering of dogs, cats, monkeys, pigs, rabbits, rats, and mice will no longer be tolerated. And you helped us educate more doctors, policy makers, and citizens about how nutrition can be a powerful tool for better health and disease prevention.

Together we scored some major successes in 2007 that I want to celebrate with you in this year-end report. But don't think our work is done. Our battles are ongoing and we'll face even more challenges in 2008.

In the coming year, we'll continue to protest cruelty to animals in labs and classrooms — and continue to promote good nutrition. We'll rally support, fight in the courts when necessary, and never back down.

That's why I'm asking you to help set feedback on the enclosed reply form, and help move us swiftly into the new year.

We urgently need your support. Our success from our members gives us the funds we need to save more animal and human lives. And your help!

Just look at what you enabled us to do:

We created major roadblocks to building a new facility in Chandler, Arizona when it approved zoning changes for the project — because if Covance succeeded, it would have tortured and killed every day.

We stood up to universities that used live animals in education. When we began our campaign, the vast majority were using live animals in their labs — stopped using live animals this year —
